noun - the human race; human beings collectively.

How well does your love cross-culturally reflect your religion?

vv. 33-37

Deuteronomy 10:12-22; James 1:27

“Let professing Christians especially lay to heart the solemn lesson that there does lie in their very religion the possibility of their being culpably unconcerned about some of the world’s wound, and that, if their love to God does not find a field for its manifestation in active love to man, worship in the Temple will be mockery.”
